Asauchi Kashi, a Japanese lawn tennis player who has been putting up a clever game in New York tournaments, was somewhat on the order of Krumpholtz, being extremely accurate from the base line and conservative on the volley. Experts expect the Japanese to be factors in tournaments.

One of the peculiarities of a recent American league combat was that the pitcher, who was a first-class outfielder, also a better batsman than he was rated in his pitching days. Now he is turning his attention to the infield and doing very capable work.

Fred Coubme has been in the American league for several seasons, first with the Red Sox and later with Cleveland, but he never had won a game from the Yankees until recently, when he replaced Bagby at the start of the tenth inning. The Indians won in their half of the tenth and the victory is credited to Coubme.

Theodore Brotenstein, once famous southpaw and for many years an umpire in the Southern league, is now doing Y. M. C. A. work at Camp Gordon, near Atlanta, Ga.

COP RECEIVES KISS FOR FINDING MONEY
 [BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS]
 Gary, Ind., Aug. 8.—Sophia Ruska is convinced that it is a good search that blows somebody wealthy. Sophia, an elderly woman, was suspected of having liquor hidden in her home, and this is dry territory. Hence a search by the police was instituted.

Instead of liquor the police found Sophia sick in bed mourning the loss of fifteen years' savings amounting to approximately $1,200. The police took pity on her and, although convinced they would find no liquor, continued their search. They located the money in the pocket of an old sweater.

Sophia was so happy she kissed the police captain who headed the search.

George Gibson, dean of the Giant catching staff and one of the most competent backstops in the National league, was 35 years old. Gibson was a great catcher a decade and more ago, when many of the present day major leaguers were in backstoppers, and he has a son as old as Walter Hoyt. However, he is still far from through, and it is probable that before the present season draws to a close he will be behind the bat in many games for the Giants.

Gibson is a native of London, Ontario, and broke into professional baseball with the Buffalo club of the old Eastern league in 1903.

Princeton university is looking out for a football member. The signing of Paul T. Dawson by the Columbia university athletic committee as assistant director of athletics and the engagement of Bill Roper, mentor to the Tiger championship eleven, leaves the Tiger town officials with but a small sliver of available coaches to make a selection from.

It is rumored that "Speedy" Rush has already declined the appointment. The former Orange and Brown instructor is now engaged in the profitable business of ammunition making. He feels that to leave his war work at the present time would be an un-justified sacrifice.

Joe Wood was considered a dangerous hitter in his days as a pitcher, but nobody ever realized just how much playing ability was done up in

CAPTURES COLONEL AND ENTIRE STAFF; SMOKES OUT REGIMENTAL HEADQUARTERS

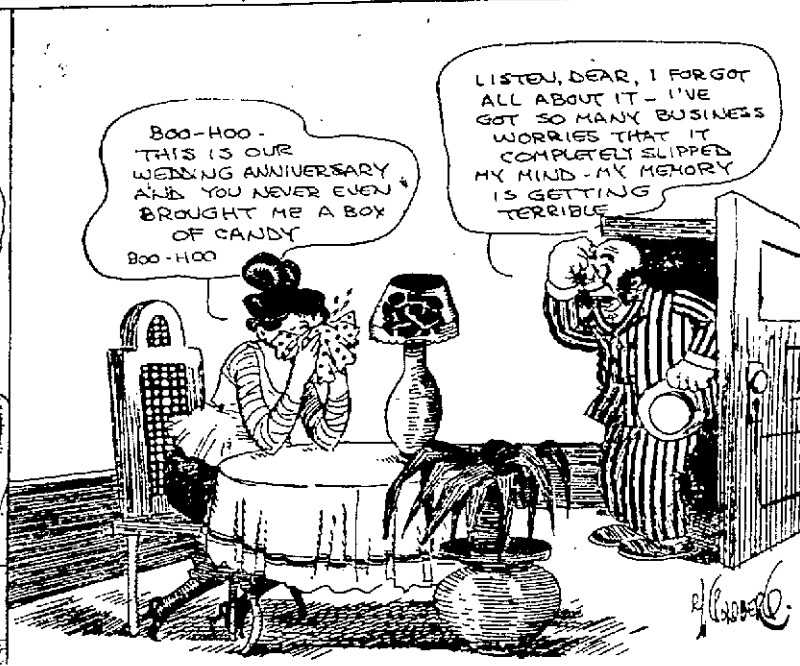

The Germans came out holding their hands high in surrender.

During the height of the recent counter-attack of the Americans on the west front a young corporal captured sixty-four of the enemy by his strategy. Corporal Hanan of an infantry regiment saw a German leave his machine gun and dash for a cave. Hanan called some privates and stationed them at the mouth of the cave while he, taking some hand grenades, climbed the hillside to what looked like a chimney and began tossing them down. The result was the smothering of sixty-four privates and three officers, one of them a colonel. All were captured.

 almost finished.

The second was at a recruiting station and the individual a man who was evidently a rather insignificant portion of the family. The big shape of the family was along, in the shape of a wife with a chin that meant business from the start. The chin of Mr. Hoves Best, for that was his name, had started out all right but had gone only half way and then given up and retreated.

"You have your wife's permission?"
 asked the official.

"Thirty-nine," said Mr. Best, who showed by his actions that he was very glad of a possible chance of escaping with nothing worse than mul-tipliation of his size. "As-surably, sir, haven't I deary?"

"You have," replied the grim woman. "Not only have you my permission to enlist but I insist upon it."

That settled the thing, for the recruiting officer hurried the examination along in his haste to get the couple out of his sight. "What is your age and nationality?"

"Why I'm, I'm—Just what is my age, lovey?"

"Thirty-nine," American," came from the woman's lips.

"You look a trifle puny," suggested the recruiting officer, "rather as though you hadn't and enough outdoor exercise. Have you led a fast life, too much drink. How about your habits? Have you indulged in any dissipation lately?"

The stern wife stuck up her nose and turned away in utter contempt, as though she would ever allow her husband to lead a riotous life.

The husband seized the chance and leaning over quickly whispered in an awed voice:

"Why, don't ever tell, but last month I smoked several cigarettes."

Gunner Depew

By ALBERT N. DEPEW

Ex-Gunner and Chief Petty Officer U. S. Navy—Member of the Foreign Legion of France—Captain Gun Turret, French Battleship Casard—Winner of the Croix de Guerre.

Copyright, 1918, by Reddy and Britton Co., Through Special Arrangement With the George Matthew Adams Service.

There were about forty barracks in the line group at Neustrelitz and two large Zepelin sheds. The barracks were about like those at Swinemunde—at least, they were at first. Along the sides of the rooms were long shelves or benches, and every three feet were boards set in grooves. The shelves were what we had to sleep on, and the boards in the grooves divided them up so that only a certain number of men could use each bench.

The following morning we nearly dropped dead when the Huns pulled in a large wagon full of clothing. We thought we never would have anything to wear but our underclothes. They issued to each man a pair of trousers, thin model, a thin coat about like the soccer-sucker coats some people wear in the summer, an overcoat about as warm as if it had been made of cigarette papers, a skull cap and a pair of shoes, which were a day's labor to carry around. Not one of us received socks, shirts or underwear.

The toe was cut from the right shoe of the pair I received, and as my wounds were in the right thigh and my leg had stiffened up considerably and got very sore, I got pretty anxious, because there was nothing but slush underwear, and I was afraid I might lose my leg. So I thought that if I went to the commandant and made a kick I might get a good shoe. I hesitated about it at first, but finally made up my mind and went to see him.

I told him that it was slushy outside, and that the water ran through the hole in my shoe and made it bad for my whole leg, which was wounded. He examined the shoe and looked at the open toe for some time, and I thought he was going to put up an argument, but would give in finally. Then he asked me what I wanted. I thought that was plain enough to see, but I said just as easily as I could that I wanted a shoe without a hole in the toe.

"So the water runs into it, does it?" he said. "Well, my advice to you is to get a knife, cut a hole in the heel and let the water out." All the other swine in the room laughed very loud at this, and I guess this Fritz thought he was a great comedian. But somehow or other, it did not strike me as funny that I just had to laugh, and I was able, after quite a struggle, to keep from even sneezing. It was a harder struggle than that to keep from doing something else, though.

Our meals were just about the same as at Swinemunde—the bread was just as muddy, the barley coffee just as rank, and the soup just as cabbagey. The second morning after we had had our barley coffee, one of the sentries came to our barracks, which was number 7-B, and gave each of us an envelope and a sheet of writing paper. Then he told us to write though, many of us thought it was the name of the town, and we got to calling it the Brewery, because the name ended in Lager. Whatever beer was brewed there was not for us though.

I noticed that all the time he was writing the word and giving us the stationery, the sentry was laughing and having a great time with his own little self, but I figured he was just acting German, and that nothing was important about it.

We were all tickled to death to get a chance to let our people know where we were, and each man thought a long time about what he would say, and who he would write to, before he ever started to write. Each man wanted to say all he could in the small space he had, and we wanted to let our friends know how badly they were treating us without saying it in so many words, because we knew the Huns would censor the letters, and it would go hard with anyone who complained much. So most of the men said they were having a great time and were treated very well, and spread it on so thick that their friends would figure they were lying because they had to.

One fellow had an idea that was better than that, though. He had been in jail in Portsmouth, England, for three months, for beating up a constable, and he had had a pretty tough time. So he wrote a part of his letter that he had been captured by the Germans, but that everything was going along pretty well. In fact, he said, the only other trip he had ever been on, where he had a better time, was the three months' vacation he had spent in Portsmouth two years before, which he thought the friend would remember. He said that trip was better than this one, so the friend could figure out for himself how pleasant this one was. Everybody thought this was a great idea, but unfortunately not all of us had been in jail, so we could not all use it. Which was just as well, we thought, because the Germans would be suspicious if all of us compared this vacation with others.

A few of the men did not have anybody they could write to, and some did not know their friends' addresses, so they would write letters to friends of the other men, and sign it with the friend's nickname.

As soon as a man had finished his letter, he had to go out to the center of the camp, where they had built a raised platform. There the sentries took the letters, and the men formed around the square. There were officers on the platform reading the letters. We thought they read them there in the open, before us, so that we would know they were not tampering with the letters, and we thought the heaven would fall if they were getting so unkind to that.

Finally, all the men had finished their letters and turned them over to the officers, who read them. And then we saw why the sentry laughed.

The officers tore up every one of the letters. They were anxious that we would see them do it, so none of us would have any hope that our friends would get word.

But we said to ourselves that, if it was information they wanted, they had as much as was good for them, which was none at all, because I do not think one letter in the bunch had a single word of truth in it. But we were all very angry and pretty low after that, because it showed the Huns still had plenty of Kultur left, after all, and we knew there was rough sledding ahead of us. Also, some of the men were sore because they had wasted their time thinking up different ways of tipping their friends off to the real state of affairs, and all for nothing. Why they should worry about time, I could not see. Time was the only thing we had plenty of, and I for one thought we were going to have still more of it.

Going back to the barracks we tried to sing "Tuck Up Your Troubles," but there was not much pep in it. We were not downhearted, though; at least, we said we were not.

CHAPTER XX.

Kultur—the Real Stuff.

Neustrelitz was mainly for Russian prisoners, and there were neither British nor French soldiers interned there—only sailors of the merchant marine such as the men I was with. The Russians were given far worse treatment than any other prisoners. This was for two reasons, as near as I could make out. One was that the Russian would stand most anything, whereas the British and French could only be goaded to a certain point, and beyond that lay trouble. The other reason was that the Russians sent German prisoners to Siberia, or at least, so the Huns thought, and Fritz hates the cold. So, hating the Russians, and realizing that they were used to being under-dogs, Fritz picked on them and bullied them in a way that the rest of us would not have stood. We would have rushed them and gone west with bayonets first.

The barracks were made of spruce, and were about ninety feet long and twenty-five feet wide, and you can take it from me that as carpenters, whoever made them were fine farmers. There were cracks in them that you could drive an automobile through. When we were there, each barracks had a stove in the center, a good stove and a big one, but at first it was of no use to us, because the Germans would not give us coal or wood for it. But after shivering for a while, we began ripping the boards out of the barracks, and taking the dividing boards from the benches that we used for beds.

Later, they gave each of us a mattress filled with wood shavings, and a blanket that was about as warm as a pane of glass. The mattresses were placed on the ground in the barracks, which were very damp; and after three or four days, the shavings would begin to rot and the mattresses to smell. In order to keep warm we slept as close together as we could, which caused our various diseases to spread rapidly.

When we were receiving our rations, the sentries would offer us an extra ration if we would take a lash from their belts. We were so hungry that many and many a man would go up and take a swat in any part of his body from the heavy leather belts with brass-tongue and buckle, just to get a little more "shadow" soup or barley coffee or mud bread.

One morning the sentries picked out ten men from our barracks, of which I was one, and drilled us over a field near the kitchen. There was a large tank in the field and we had to pump water into it. It was very cold, and we were weak and sick, so we would fall one after another, not caring whether we ever got up or not. Fritz would smash those who fell with his rifle butt. We asked for gloves, because our hands were freezing, but all we got was "Nichts."

After we had been there for about an hour and a half, one of our men became very sick, so that I thought he was going to die, and when he fell over, I reported it to a sentry. The sentry came over, saw him lying in the snow, yelled, "Schwein! nicht krank!" grabbed him by the shoulder, and pulled him all the way across the field to the office of the camp commander. Then he was placed in the guard house, where he remained for two days. The next thing we knew, the Russians had been ordered to make a box, and were being marched to the guard house to put him in it and bury him.

Another thing at Neustrelitz, that was pretty hard to stand, was the pretty habit the Huns had of coming up to the barbed wire and teasing us as though we were wild animals in a cage. Sometimes there would be crowds of people lined along the wire throwing things at us, and spitting, and having a great time generally. It was harder than ever when a family party would arrive, with water and butter, and maybe grosvater and grosmutter, and all the little Boche kinder, because as you probably know, the Germans take food with them whenever they go on a party, no matter what kind, and they would stand there and stare at us like the boobs they were, eating all the time—and we so hungry that we could have eaten ourselves, almost. After they had stared a while, they would begin to feel more at home, and then would start the throwing and spitting and the "schweinhund" songfest, and they would have a great time generally. Probably, when they got home, they would grieve off a medal for themselves in honor of the visit.

Then, too, there were always Hun soldiers on leave or off duty, who made it a point to pay us a visit, and though I do not think they were as bad as the civilians, especially the women, they were bad enough.

We had one bucket in each barracks, and as these buckets were used for both washing and drinking, they were always dirty. We boiled the water when we washed the clothes, to get rid of the cooties, and that left a settling in it that looked just like red lead. We had to get the water from a hydrant outside of the barracks, and for a while we drank it. But after several of the boys had gone west and we could not figure out why, a man told us he thought the water was poisoned, and a Russian doctor, who was a prisoner, slipped us word about it also. So, after that, very few of us drank water from the hydrant. I was scared stiff at first, because I had had some of the water, but after that I did not touch hydrant water.

It was a good thing for us that there was always plenty of snow in Germany, and even luckier that the Huns did not shoot us for eating it. It was about the only thing they did not deprive us of—it was not verboten.

Dinner Stories

A government press censor was talking about the German press censorship.

"We found on some prisoners recently," he said, "the German censorship' latest prohibition. Promis-ment among these was an order to the press not to mention under any circumstances the growing use in Germany of dog flesh for food.

"That prohibition reminds me of a story—a story that may contain a lot of truth," he said.

"A German prisoner, the story runs, was rebuked by a sergeant for the sloppy way he was feeding and looking after some Red Cross dogs. 'I guess you think you know a lot about dogs,' the sergeant sneered.

"Yes, sir, that's right," said the prisoner, 'for let me tell you, sir, I've been cooking in a Berlin restaurant for the last two years.'

Negro conscripts with their families and friends thronged the Cortland street ferry at New York recently, laughing and skylarking as if bound for a picnic. The drafted men embraced their women folk and kissed their children aloft before embarking for camp. Nowhere was a tear shed, and if a sigh was heaved it went unheard.

"Jes a l'il vacation, kiddo," said one large, cordovan-colored roysterer to his sweetheart, "ah, ah! bring you de kaiser's helmet for a stew pot."

"Bring his sword, anyway, Sam," urged the girl, "you'll need a new razor by that time."

Let me see where I left off in the last story. Oh, I remember now. Billy Bunney had just said good-bye to Old Mother Magpie. After that, the little rabbit hopped along until he came to an old sawmill. And, oh, dear me! The sound of the big saw, as it cut through the logs was dreadful. And it frightened the little rabbit so that he started around and hopped away so fast that he ran right into a pair of oxen hauling a great log to the mill. And if he had knocked over one of those oxen, the man who was driving them would have said something much worse than "Gee!"

"I must see where I'm going," thought the little rabbit, and he took out all his wits and just then he saw something dreadful. Yes, sir! There was Old Man Weasel looking out at him from behind a bush.

"Now I've got you!" and he jumped out and caught Billy Bunney by the ear and dragged him away toward his house, where Mrs. Weasel stood at the front door with a big knife in her hand.

"Won't we have nice rabbit stew!" she cried, and then she sharpened the knife on the stone step, and pinned. And just then up ran the policeman dog and he happened that he grabbed hold of the front door knob and pulled it out, and after that he threw it at Old Man Weasel and hit him on the head.

"Goodness gracious meebus, as my dear Uncle Lucky would say," cried Billy Bunney, and he sat down and took a cabbage sandwich out of his pocket. "I'll eat this while I have time, for there's no telling what may happen next, and maybe if it does I'll never get another change," and less than five hundred short seconds there wasn't any cabbage sandwich left, not even a crumb. Well, maybe there was a crumb, for when the little rabbit hopped away a little black cat crawled up to the place and took something away to her hole in the ground.

"And now where shall I go?" the little rabbit asked himself, but why he did I'm sure I don't know, for if he didn't know, how could he answer himself?"

Well, just then, all of a sudden, who should come by but Uncle Lucky Lettindfoot in his Luckymobile, and as soon as he saw his little nephew Billy Bunney he asked him to go for a ride. So he hopped Billy Bunney, and then he hopped the horn three times and a half and away they went to see the world series between the Bunnettown Rabbits, and the Rabbitsville Bunnies, and in the next story I'll tell you the name of the umpire and who won the game and why there wasn't enough pennants to go around—that is, if they send me a ticket in time to see the game.

FOOTVILLE

Footville, Aug. 7.—Mrs. Charles Haworth recently returned from a week's visit at Crown Point, Indiana, where she visited at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Trevonah. Returning, she also visited friends in Chicago.

Lou Walters and family from near Beloit motored to this place and spent Sunday at the home of Frank Walters and family.

On Monday evening more than a dozen men went to the E. Bonis farm. Starting out about 6:30 to set up sheaves of grain. They worked faithfully and about 9:00 o'clock had the grain all in shocks, after which they gathered on the lawn, where Mr. Bonis served drafers and generous dishes of ice cream.

Among those who assisted in the work were Peter Emmer, John Frank, Frank Kenna, Henry Long, Ernie Silverthorn, Will Honeysett, Fred Snyce, Fred Bemis, Mr. Garde, Jessie Dabson, Clinton Cator, Mr. Ryan, a neighbor, was also a helper. Mr. and Mrs. Savies Sr. from Janesville, their son, and daughter and George Gooch were also present. Mr. Bemis surely appreciates the work done at this time to help out the tenant on his farm.

Frank Walters came home from Elkhart and spent Sunday with his family, returning on Monday morning.

Mrs. Josephine Tallard Cannon came from Edgerton on Monday and is the guest of her friend Miss Daisy Silverthorn, which was held on Sunday. Mrs. Cannon was a former teacher in our school.

Arthur Jones, our local butcher, is quite elated over the fact that from his small tract of ground which he sowed to grain early in the season, and which he threshed on Tuesday, yielded him 50 bushels of fine wheat and 100 bushels of barley. Mr. Jones comes to this place that Miss Marion Howe, adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Howe of Orfordville, has enrolled as nurse and will soon depart to begin her duties as such. Miss Howe was a recent graduate of the Evansville high school and has many friends, who wish her the best of success in her new undertaking.

Mrs. Bessie Bush entertained at supper on Tuesday afternoon, having as her guests, Mrs. Josephine Tallard Cannon, and Miss Daisy Silverthorn. Mrs. Wm. Timm spent Tuesday in the country at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Prebe and demonstrated the fact that she was a capital hand at toying tobacco.

Roy Timm and wife and little son Jean, returned on Monday from a visit at the home of Frank Trevonah in Crown Point, Indiana.

Many are in attendance at the picnic on the lawn at the Catholic church, given by the members of that congregation, and despite the fact that the weather is extremely warm, all seem to be enjoying themselves immensely.

Some time since, perhaps less than one year ago, when the urgent request came for more workers for the Red Cross, the young ladies took up this work in their society, and have since been faithful workers, and many are the finished garments these girls have turned over to that organization. Now these same young ladies have planned a social for the evening of Friday evening, Aug. 8, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Seick, southwest of town, and an invitation is extended to each and every one. The young ladies have prepared a very nice program, which will no doubt be interesting to all, ice cream and waffles will be served, and one-half the proceeds of the evening will be given to the Red Cross. AGRICULTURAL and GARDEN DEPT

ALLEN B. WEST, Director

(Allen B. West, Director.)

Two or three times lately the readers of the Gazette have had their attention called to a little green insect that is especially abundant this year on the underside of the leaves of our potato, bean and dahlia. The writer has frequently called the attention of the gardeners in his rounds to these destructive insects and has referred them to the very timely directions that appeared some weeks ago in these columns. The writer has also distributed literature that pertains to this timely subject. Now the editor of this paper has asked me to write a little more specifically concerning the treatment to be applied. When the writer had reached this point, the evening mail was brought in, which contained the following letter from the Wisconsin State Agricultural Society, which meets the requirements so exactly that he ventures to insert it at this point.

The Apple Leafhopper on Potato. This insect has appeared in destructive numbers over a large part of Wisconsin and has caused the leaves of early potatoes to turn black and dry up. In the worst cases even the stems have blackened and died. Most of the damage is done by the young insects which stay on the underside of the leaves and run rapidly but do not hop. These were changing to adult with wings in some parts of Wisconsin July 10 to 25. These little green leafhoppers fly rapidly and will spread to late potatoes, beans and adjoining crops, where another generation of young will be produced. Just how serious this will be cannot be predicted until early in August. Aphids are also appearing on many of the fields. They will be found in small patches on the tips of the leaves. The remedy for the leafhopper will apply equally well for the aphids.

attended an aspen—a pleasant evening. Many attended the funeral of the late Mrs. Norman, which was held on Sunday morning from the Catholic church. Interment was in the Janesville cemetery.

Harry Langdon, after a seven days' furlough spent with friends here, left this morning for Camp Grant. Mrs. Langdon, who also has been here for a few days with him returned at the same time to her work in Beloit.

Words of Miss Merle Parmentley will be greatly pleased to know that she is quite a little better at present writing, and it is hoped she will continue to improve until she is well and strong again.

LIMA

Lima, Aug. 7.—Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Persons entertained a lady friend from Chicago last week.

Miss Hannah Vance is very low.

Henry Spence's barn was struck by lightning during the storm Wednesday.

Miss Bessie Richmond is home from Chicago this week.

Messrs. an Mesdames Ray, Boyd and S. J. Elmeson drove to River Falls Sunday and returned Monday. They visited the Deils on the way.

Earl Reese was home from the Great Lakes this week. On his return he goes to Horton Roads, Va. to turn his work over to his daughter, Mrs. Millard, Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Freeman are entertaining their two nieces of Milwaukee.

Advocating a Boss.

"Are you still in favor of votes for women?" "Yes," replied Mr. Meekton. "But I'm afraid it won't work out right until there's a system that'll make 'em all vote the way Henrietta tells 'em to."

Remedy: The best remedy is, nicotine sulphate, ordinarily sold as "Black Leaf 40" by seed stores and drug stores. Use it in the proportion of 1 part to 500 of water. It is economical to a gallon, or a tablespoonful to a pail. Five times as much soap as tobacco solution should be added to the water.

If the "Black 40" is not obtainable, kerosene emulsion may be used. To make this add two gallons of kerosene, one bar of soap, one quart soft soap to a gallon of boiling water, and run back and forth through a spray pump till it makes a creamy emulsion. (In small amounts an egg beater may be used.) Use one part of this mixture to seven parts of cold water.

Either the tobacco solution or the kerosene emulsion must be thoroughly sprayed so as to strike the underside of the leaves, as these remedies only kill the insects that they hit. Use an iron pipe bent into a crook for spraying, and reach over just in front of the sprayer by drawing a heavy stick over them, allowing the spray to strike just as the plants are bent and springing up. The young hoppers are readily killed by this method. The ones with wings will usually fly and escape the treatment. If they are numerous enough to warrant treatment, spray in the early morning when they are sluggish. The reason late potatoes were not attacked was because the leafhoppers flew to the heads and laid their eggs before the late potatoes were up. The second generation of adults are now flying to the late potatoes. These will be watched and if treatment seems necessary, further information will be given.

to anybody we wanted to, after which he chalked on the door in big letters: KRIGSGEFANGENENLAGER and told us it was the return address. We were all surprised, and asked each other where we were, because we had thought we were in Neustrelitz. After a while, we learned that it means "Prisoner-of-War-Camp." At first,
